DETAILED CONVEYANCE & DESCENT

HOLDER 1

1154-1189 - after circa 1170

Warine son of Godfrey

Transfer:

Grant by Henry II, probably during the reign of Henry II

Previous holder:

The Crown, under Henry II

Holding arrangement:

sole

Share / interest:

The estate or manor of Abram, subject to the feudal relationship with the Newton fee

Narrative / explanation:

Victoria County History states that before and after the Conquest Abram was a member of the manor and fee of Newton and that Henry II gave it to Warine son of Godfrey. The precise date of the grant is not known; the local historical account places it during the reign of Henry II, 1154-1189, and a modern local archival publication places it approximately around 1170. This was a grant in fee farm rather than evidence that Abram was an independent barony or distinct titled lordship.

HOLDER 2

1212 - after 1212

Richard de Abram

Transfer:

Descent from Warine son of Godfrey; intervening successions are not securely documented

ABRAM MANOR

Previous holder:

Warine son of Godfrey and his descendants

Holding arrangement:

sole

Share / interest:

Four oxgangs or half a carucate in Edburgham, with one third given in alms

Narrative / explanation:

At the great inquest of service in 1212, Richard de Abram is recorded as holding land in Edburgham, now Abram, by the gift of King Henry in fee farm and rendering four shillings yearly. The VCH states that the descendants of Warine adopted the local name and held the estate to the seventeenth century, but it does not provide a continuous succession between Warine and Richard or between Richard and later medieval members of the family.

Thomas Abram, Lord of Abram

Transfer:

Unspecified succession within the Abram family

Previous holder:

Earlier Abram family holder; exact predecessor unknown

Holding arrangement:

sole

Share / interest:

Not stated

Narrative / explanation:

Thomas Abram is reported by the VCH to have been lord about 1500. In 1540 he was defendant in a claim concerning messuages and other property in Abram, and in 1567 Thomas Abraham was deforciant of the manor of Abram and lands in the township. The source does not provide a continuous legal descent from John Abram in 1528 and therefore no direct transfer between those two holders is asserted.

Settlement by indenture, with life interest

Previous holder:

Thomas Abram

Holding arrangement:

Share / interest:

Life interest

Narrative / explanation:

An indenture dated 10 December 1598 secured the estate to Mary, wife of Thomas Abram, for her life. The settlement provided that on her death the estate would revert to Henry Lance and Susan his wife, the elder daughter of Thomas Abram and her heirs, and in default to Philip Langton and Mary his wife, the younger daughter of Thomas Abram. This entry records a life interest and future uses rather than an outright conveyance to Mary in fee simple.

ABRAM MANOR

Transfer:

Remainder under the 10 December 1598 settlement; the manor was assigned to Susan after Thomas Abram's death

Previous holder:

Thomas Abram and Mary Abram

Holding arrangement:

joint

Share / interest:

Susan Lance's inheritance, with Henry Lance as her husband; exact legal form of the husband's interest is not specified

Narrative / explanation:

The VCH states that Thomas Abram died in 1606 leaving two daughters and that the manor was assigned to the elder daughter Susan, who had married Henry Lance. This accords with the 1598 settlement, which gave the reversion to Henry Lance and Susan and their heirs. Henry Lance was buried in 1629-30; the estate remained associated with the Lance family during this period.

Transfer:

Succession as son and heir of Henry and Susan Lance; exact legal transfer not stated

Previous holder:

Henry Lance and Susan Lance

Holding arrangement:

sole

Share / interest:

Not stated

Narrative / explanation:

Abraham Lance is described as the son and heir of Henry and Susan Lance. The VCH records him as of Abram in the recusant rolls in 1626 and states that in 1652 he petitioned for removal of the sequestration of his mother's lands. A related note records that Abraham Lance died about 1659 without male issue. The source does not establish a precise date at which he obtained the manor or whether sequestration interrupted his possession.

Previous holder:

Abraham Lance

Holding arrangement:

Share / interest:

Receiver for Abraham Lance and his wife and their heirs, with remainder to the use of William Gerard

Narrative / explanation:

In 1649 Abraham Lance appointed William Gerard of Garswood, son and heir apparent of Sir William Gerard of Brynn, receiver for the benefit of Abraham Lance, his wife and their heirs, with remainder to the use of William Gerard. This is recorded as a receivership and remainder arrangement, not simply as proof that Gerard immediately became the beneficial owner. A bond signed by Gerard in 1667 states that Abraham Lance had died about seven years earlier without male issue.

The VCH states that the estate descended with Richard Hilton's daughter Abigail to her children by her husband Thomas Crook. This identifies the Crook family as the next possessors after Richard Hilton, but the exact date and legal form of the transfer are not given. Thomas Crook is described as a substantial landowner and benefactor; the manor was subsequently associated with their son Richard Crook.

Five co-heir shares; the precise share in the manor is not stated

Shared holding:

Five Crook sisters and their husbands

Narrative / explanation:

After Richard Crook's death in November 1727, the inheritance passed to his five sisters as co-heirs. The VCH states that the manor of Abram seems to have been the portion of the second sister, Anne, who married John Darbyshire of Warrington, and that their only child Abigail married Thomas Clayton. Because the wording is 'seems to have been,' the exact allocation is retained as uncertain. In 1734 all five heir groups joined in a lease of the manor.

Jointly represented in the 1734 lease; individual shares not stated

Shared holding:

All five Crook heir groups

Narrative / explanation:

In 1734 all the heirs joined in a lease of the manor of Abram. The VCH lists the five married heir groups by name. This is direct evidence of their collective participation in the manor's lease, but it does not by itself establish that each party held an equal legal share or that the lease represented a final partition. The manor is elsewhere stated to have passed through Anne Darbyshire's daughter Abigail to Thomas Clayton.
