DETAILED CONVEYANCE & DESCENT

HOLDER 1

1066 - before 1086

Siward, Earl of Northumbria

Transfer:

Earlier holder recorded in Domesday Book; the subsequent transfer or forfeiture of this Acklam holding is not documented by the source used.

Holding arrangement:

sole

Share / interest:

The source identifies Siward as lord of one Acklam component, but does not quantify his share in relation to the whole later manor.

Shared holding:

Acklam component: pre-Conquest holding

Narrative / explanation:

Domesday evidence records Siward as the lord in 1066 of one Acklam holding. The source does not establish that this component was identical in extent to the later Crown manor, nor does it record the conveyance by which it came into the hands of the two unnamed men recorded in 1086.

HOLDER 2

1066 - 1086

Orm, Pre-Conquest lord of an Acklam holding

Transfer:

In 1086 the holding was recorded under Count Robert of Mortain; the precise conveyance or mechanism of change is not stated in the cited source.

ACKLAM MANOR

Previous holder:

Orm

Holding arrangement:

sole

Share / interest:

A separate Acklam component, distinct from Siward's holding.

Shared holding:

Acklam component: Orm's land

Narrative / explanation:

Domesday records Orm as lord in 1066 and Count Robert of Mortain as tenant-in-chief and lord in 1086 for this Acklam component. The entry describes the land as waste in 1086. This is evidence for a component of the later locality, not proof that Count Robert held the complete later Crown manor of Acklam.

HOLDER 3

1086

Two unnamed men

Transfer:

The source records this holding in 1086 but does not identify the preceding transfer from Siward or the later descent.

Previous holder:

Siward

Holding arrangement:

joint

Share / interest:

Joint holding by two unnamed men; the individual shares are not stated.

Shared holding:

Acklam component: land of men, two

ACKLAM MANOR

Narrative / explanation:

Domesday records two unnamed men as tenant-in-chief and lords in 1086 of another Acklam component, formerly held by Siward in 1066. The source does not establish whether this component later became part of the Crown manor, although the locality and manor identity are consistent with that possibility.

HOLDER 41086*Count Robert of Mortain, Count of Mortain, Domesday tenant-in-chief*Transfer:

Recorded as tenant-in-chief and lord in 1086 of the Acklam component formerly attributed to Orm; the later descent is not established by the cited public sources.

Previous holder:

Orm

Holding arrangement:

sole

Share / interest:

The holding was one component of Acklam, not demonstrably the whole later manor.

Shared holding:

Acklam component: land of Count Robert of Mortain

Narrative / explanation:

Count Robert of Mortain held one Acklam component in 1086. The source identifies him as both tenant-in-chief and lord and describes the land as waste. No later source used here securely traces this component into the medieval or modern Crown manor.

HOLDER 5

1066 - 1086

Waltheof, Anglo-Saxon earl, pre-Conquest lord of a Barthorpe holding

Transfer:

The Barthorpe component formerly under Waltheof was recorded in 1086 under Count Robert of Mortain; the precise conveyance is not stated.

Previous holder:

Waltheof

Holding arrangement:

sole

Share / interest:

A separate Barthorpe component, not demonstrably the whole later Acklam Manor.

Shared holding:

Barthorpe component: land of Count Robert of Mortain

Narrative / explanation:

Domesday records Waltheof as the 1066 lord of one Barthorpe component and Count Robert of Mortain as tenant-in-chief and lord in 1086. The entry describes the holding as waste in 1086. This component is relevant to the place named in the manor record but cannot be assumed to have formed part of the later Acklam Manor without further medieval evidence.

HOLDER 61066 - 1086*Forne, son of Sigulf, Pre-Conquest lord of a Barthorpe holding*Transfer:

The Barthorpe component formerly under Forne was recorded in 1086 under Odo the bowman; the precise conveyance is not stated.

Previous holder:

Forne, son of Sigulf

Holding arrangement:

sole

Share / interest:

A separate Barthorpe component, not demonstrably the whole later Acklam Manor.

Shared holding:

Barthorpe component: land of Odo the bowman

Narrative / explanation:

Domesday records Forne, son of Sigulf, as the 1066 lord of one Barthorpe component and Odo the bowman as tenant-in-chief and lord in 1086. The holding comprised two ploughlands and was waste in 1086. No later descent into the manor recorded as Acklam Manor has been established.

ACKLAM MANOR

Transfer:

Recorded as tenant-in-chief and lord in 1086 of the Barthorpe component formerly held by Forne; the later descent is not established.

Previous holder:

Forne, son of Sigulf

Holding arrangement:

sole

Share / interest:

The holding was one component of Barthorpe, not demonstrably the whole later manor.

Shared holding:

Barthorpe component: land of Odo the bowman

Narrative / explanation:

Odo the bowman held one Barthorpe component in 1086. The source gives no later descent for this holding and no basis for treating Odo as a holder of the complete later Acklam Manor.

HOLDER 81892*The Crown*Transfer:

The late nineteenth-century published description states that the manor belonged to the Crown. The date of acquisition and the intervening descent are not stated.

Holding arrangement:

sole

Share / interest:

The manor as described in the late nineteenth-century source.

Shared holding:

Acklam Manor: Crown holding

ACKLAM MANOR

Narrative / explanation:

A late nineteenth-century account of Acklam parish states expressly that the manor belonged to the Crown. The same account lists several private landowners in the township and separately describes a 975-acre estate in Barthorpe as a distinct manor belonging to Lady Mary G. Vyner. Accordingly, this entry is limited to the Crown's Acklam Manor and does not include the Vyner Barthorpe estate. The source does not reveal when or by what instrument the Crown acquired the manor.
