Shared holding:

Unnamed serjeanty tenant or tenants

Narrative / explanation:

Eyton states that Ackleton was one of three members of Worfield which had, at a very early period, perhaps in the reign of Henry I, been bestowed on tenants by serjeantry. This establishes an early dependent tenure but not a named individual descent. Eyton further records uncertainty over whether Ackleton should be considered under Badger or under Worfield. The entry therefore records the documented origin of the holding without assigning a named lord or inferring a later transmission.

R. W. Eyton, Antiquities of Shropshire, volume 3, section 'Ackleton, Ewdness, and Roughton', pp. 112-13; the passage discusses Ackleton as an early serjeanty holding and notes the alternative Badger or Worfield connection.
