DETAILED CONVEYANCE & DESCENT

HOLDER 1

late 12th century - after late 12th century

Ranulph de Glanville, Lord Chief Justice of England, royal justiciar

Transfer:

Earliest securely identified medieval lordship; the manor was the lordship of Ranulph de Glanville.

Holding arrangement:

sole

Narrative / explanation:

Copinger expressly states that Aldringham Manor was the lordship of Ranulph de Glanville, Lord Chief Justice in 1180. This is not derived merely from his foundation of nearby religious houses; the source directly links him to the manor.

Relationship to present holder

No published relationship path recorded.

HOLDER 2

late 12th century - before 1266

William de Glanville, Member of the Glanville family

Transfer:

Descent from Ranulph de Glanville to his son, as reported by Copinger.

Previous holder:

Ranulph de Glanville

Holding arrangement:

sole

Narrative / explanation:

Copinger says the manor 'seems to have passed' from Ranulph de Glanville to William de Glanville his son. The wording preserves uncertainty about the precise legal instrument and date.

after Maud de Glanville's marriage - before succession of Sarah de Vescy

Sir William de Vescy, Knight, said by Copinger to have been created Earl of Suffolk in 1326 in right of his wife

Transfer:

Marital association and descent through Maud de Glanville, heiress of Sir Ralph de Glanville.

Previous holder:

Maud de Glanville

Holding arrangement:

joint

Shared holding:

Maud de Glanville and Sir William de Vescy

Narrative / explanation:

Copinger states that Maud de Glanville was married to Sir William de Vescy and that the manor passed to him through her. The source does not establish whether the legal holding was joint, in right of the wife, or otherwise; joint is used as the closest available classification and the narrative preserves the qualification.

Sarah de Vescy and Robert de Ufford, Sarah: Vescy heiress, Robert: royal official and landholder

Transfer:

Descent through Sarah, the only daughter of Sir William de Vescy, on her marriage to Robert de Ufford.

Previous holder:

Sir William de Vescy

Holding arrangement:

joint

Shared holding:

Sarah de Vescy and Robert de Ufford

Narrative / explanation:

Copinger states that Sir William de Vescy had an only daughter Sarah, who married Robert de Ufford, and continues the manor's descent through their son. The precise legal form and date of the transfer are not stated.

Transfer:

Succession as the son of Sarah de Vescy and Robert de Ufford.

ALDRINGHAM MANOR

Previous holder:

Sarah de Vescy and Robert de Ufford

Holding arrangement:

sole

Narrative / explanation:

Copinger states that the son of Sarah de Vescy and Robert de Ufford was summoned to Parliament as a baron on 13 January 1308 and that he was later succeeded by another Robert de Ufford. The manor link is part of Copinger's continuous Aldringham descent, although the source does not give a separate dated conveyance.

HOLDER 9

before 16 March 1336 - after 1336

Robert de Ufford, K.G., Earl of Suffolk, Knight of the Garter, 1st Earl of Suffolk, created 16 March 1336

Transfer:

Succession from the preceding Robert de Ufford.

Previous holder:

Robert de Ufford

Holding arrangement:

sole

Narrative / explanation:

Copinger states that the earlier Robert de Ufford was succeeded by another Robert de Ufford, K.G., who was created Earl of Suffolk on 16 March 1336. The manor is included in the continuous Ufford descent.

HOLDER 10

after succession of Robert de Ufford, 1st Earl of Suffolk - after the fine; life interest

William, Earl of Suffolk, second son of Robert de Ufford, 1st Earl of Suffolk

Transfer:

Succession as the second son of Robert de Ufford, 1st Earl of Suffolk, followed by a fine settling the manor on William for life.

Previous holder:

Robert de Ufford, K.G., Earl of Suffolk

Holding arrangement:

sole

Share / interest:

life estate

Narrative / explanation:

Copinger states that Robert the second was succeeded by his second son William, Earl of Suffolk. A fine was levied of Aldringham Manor between William and William Lord Huntingfield, settling the manor on the Earl for life, with remainders after the death of William Lord Huntingfield to the Earl's sons Thomas, William and Edward successively. This was a life interest with contingent or successive remainders, not an unrestricted fee-simple transfer.

Transfer:

Party to a fine concerning Aldringham Manor; the fine reserved a remainder after his death.

Previous holder:

Robert de Ufford, 1st Earl of Suffolk

Holding arrangement:

other

Share / interest:

remainder-related interest under fine

Narrative / explanation:

William Lord Huntingfield was not described by Copinger as holding the manor in possession. He was a party to the fine by which William, Earl of Suffolk, held for life and the Earl's sons were given successive remainders after the death of William Lord Huntingfield. This entry records the legal interest disclosed by the fine and avoids treating him as an ordinary sole owner.

first remainder

Shared holding:

Successive Ufford remainders

Narrative / explanation:

The fine described by Copinger settled successive remainders after the life estate of William, Earl of Suffolk, first on Thomas, then on William, then on Edward. Copinger states that all three sons died without issue. The source does not provide dates or confirm that Thomas entered into possession before the next remainder took effect.

Narrative / explanation:

Copinger states that the manor was held by Sir Joshua Vanneck in 1792 and that the manor subsequently descended from him. The same volume's Heveningham discussion gives Sir Joshua's death as 6 March 1777, which conflicts chronologically with the 1792 statement if both refer to the same individual and manor
