BIOGRAPHY

Henry Pelham Pelham-Clinton was a British aristocrat and politician who inherited the Newcastle-under-Lyne dukedom in 1795 and controlled substantial estates and electoral interests, including Aldborough and Boroughbridge.

NOTES / SOURCES

The source gives the sale to Andrew Lawson in 1834 but does not identify the prior Newcastle acquisition instrument.

Research sources:

- English Heritage, History of Aldborough Roman Site, stating that Aldborough was a valued possession of successive Dukes of Newcastle and that Andrew Lawson purchased Aldborough manor in 1834 from the 4th Duke of Newcastle; corroborated by the study A Great Electioneer and His Motives Reconsidered, which identifies the Duke as lord of the manor of Aldborough.
